1 Foreword

At Nordzucker, we attach great importance to compliance, as this is the only way we can fully meet our responsibility, secure our good reputation and increase the value of our company.

We therefore want to be informed at all times about compliance violations of any kind in our company, our business partners and in the respective supply chains. This may involve violations of legal and other regulations, of our internal company rules, of human rights or environmental obligations, or merely corresponding cases of suspicion. This is the only way we can investigate such behavior, prevent it for the future and live up to our responsibility.

The guideline on our whistleblower system (hereinafter "Guideline") is intended to facilitate the handling of possible compliance violations of which you or others become aware within the framework of our Compliance Management System and the rules of conduct existing in this respect.

We encourage everyone, i.e. not only our employees or temporary workers, but also explicitly our business partners, former employees and even third parties, to inform us of (potential or actual) compliance violations in order to help uncover misconduct and illegal business practices. Anonymous reports are also explicitly possible and welcome.

In case of doubt, do not rely on a possible report of the incident by other persons, but become active and stand up for our company and our values. Even if the content of a report is unpleasant, by informing us you are protecting our company and ultimately our jobs.

Every report is treated confidentially and only made accessible to persons who are involved in the investigation of the reported facts. We will follow up on compliance violations in any way and investigate the reported facts promptly, objectively and taking into account the presumption of innocence. No employee or third party who reports (potential or actual) compliance violations to the best of their knowledge and belief has to fear any reprisals or disadvantages as a result of the report.

2 Purpose and area of application

2.1 Purpose

An important component of our Compliance Management System is to offer the possibility to report alleged as well as actual compliance violations through various reporting channels (whistleblower system). This Guideline is intended to support whistleblowers with reports of compliance violations and corresponding suspicious cases.

In this respect, this Guidelines serves to clearly regulate the establishment and use of our whistleblower system. It provides information in which situation and how compliance violations and suspected cases must be reported. It also specifies how submitted reports will be handled.

2.2 Area of application

This Guideline applies to all companies of the Nordzucker Group (hereinafter referred to as "Nordzucker").

Compliance Coordination and the Local Compliance Coordinators are responsible for the implementation of this Guideline. The Top Management supports the implementation of this Guideline.

Should national or local law and regulations be stricter than the requirements in this document, then local law and regulations prevail.

2.3 Validity Date and regular review

The validity date of this Guideline is 28.02.2025.

This Guideline replaces the previous version.

This Guideline is to be reviewed at least once every three years or in the event of major changes such as reorganizations. This periodic review is to be documented.

3 Who can be a whistleblower?

Regardless of whether they are employees, temporary workers, suppliers, business partners or other third parties, everyone having information about potential or actual compliance violations at Nordzucker is entitled to report them.

In order to protect honest work culture and the company, Nordzucker expects from its employees to provide information on potential and actual compliance violations and corresponding suspicious cases immediately after they become known – if desired, also anonymously.

4 Whom to contact in case of (potential or actual) Compliance violations?

To ensure that the whistleblower system is accessible to everyone, we have created various options through which the whistleblower can submit a report. As far as employees are concerned, (potential or actual) compliance violations should ideally always be raised directly with the direct superior. In addition, concerns can also be raised to other internal contact points (e.g. Ethics Committee, workers council, the internal conflict advisory or similar local points of contact when available). However, if this is not possible, or if the whistleblower does not feel comfortable doing so, he can always raise questions and concerns to one of the other Internal Reporting Channels mentioned below.

The whistleblower can address information on (potential or actual) compliance violations – at his choice – via the following designated Internal Reporting Channels:

- Directly to the function Compliance Coordination of Nordzucker AG (by email at compliance@nordzucker.com),
- Directly to the Local Compliance Coordinator¹ (only for our employees),
- The Nordzucker Group's electronic whistleblower system SpeakUp. The SpeakUp system can be accessed as described in chapter 4.1.

Reports via the Internal Reporting Channels can be made orally or in writing. Upon the whistleblower's request, a personal meeting with a person responsible for receiving the report can be arranged at any time.

If the whistleblower wishes to point out a violation of human rights or environment-related obligations or human rights and environment-related risks according to the German Supply Chain Due Diligence Act (Lieferkettensorgfaltspflichtengesetz) in Nordzucker's supply chain, the whistleblower may also contact the Human Rights Officer (by email at humanrightsofficer@nordzucker.com).

Compliance Coordination must be informed immediately about reports concerning compliance violations, that were received by other functions than the above mentioned designated Internal Reporting Channels.

The persons entrusted with the tasks of an Internal Reporting Channel shall be independent in the performance of their duties, impartial, not bound by instructions, sworn to secrecy and shall have the necessary expertise through training courses organized by the employer and information documents made available.

They may perform other tasks and duties in addition to their work for the Internal Reporting Channel. However, it must always be ensured that such tasks and duties do not lead to conflicts of interest.

In addition, information on potential or actual compliance violations can also be reported to External Reporting Channels in accordance with the respective local law on whistleblower protection. The contact and access information for External Reporting Channels can be found in Annex 1 to this Guideline.

4.1 Nordzucker Group's electronic whistleblower system SpeakUp

With our electronic whistleblower system SpeakUp, we provide our employees, temporary workers, suppliers, business partners and other third parties an additional channel to report on potential or actual compliance violations.

Reports can be submitted in writing or by telephone around the clock, seven days a week and in various languages. The responsible Reporting Officer will conduct further communication with the whistleblower in the language selected by the whistleblower when submitting the report (languages of the countries in which Nordzucker operates).

¹ For Germany the Local Compliance Coordinator and the central Compliance Coordination are fulfilled by the function Compliance Coordination.

The SpeakUp system can be found via our homepage and directly by using the BKMS-System. Our employees can in addition access the SpeakUp system via the starting page of MyCube4All.

When submitting a written report via the SpeakUp system, the whistleblower can set up a secured postbox consisting of a username and password of own choice. The whistleblower must log into his secure postbox to view responses to the report or to add further information.

Reports on potential or actual compliance violations can also be submitted by telephone via the SpeakUp system. In this case, the whistleblower dials a number to access our telephone whistleblower system. Subsequently, the reporting process is started via a telephone dialogue, during which the incident can be described in detail and some questions about the facts can be answered. At the end of the reporting process, the whistleblower can also set up a secure postbox, for which the same procedure applies as mentioned above for submitting written reports.

When submitting a report via the SpeakUp system, the whistleblower can send the report either to

- The Central Internal Reporting Channel (the function Compliance Coordination of Nordzucker AG) or to
- The Local Internal Reporting Channel (the respective Local Compliance Coordinator of a subsidiary and employees of a subsidiary appointed by the respective Managing Director / Board of Directors) or
- To both at the same time.

For Australia the whistleblower can only send the report to the Local Internal Reporting Channel.

It is also possible for the whistleblower to report to the local and the central Internal Reporting Channel at the same time; in this case, the function Compliance Coordination has priority over the Local Compliance Coordinator in processing the report – if necessary, with the assistance of the respective Local Internal Reporting Channel.

The whistleblower can use the language of the country in which Nordzucker operates or English for the report. Further communication with him will be conducted in the language chosen by the whistleblower.

The use of SpeakUp is free of charge for the whistleblower.

4.2 External Reporting Channels

The whistleblower can also submit the report directly to the External Reporting Channel. This applies in particular if, in the whistleblower's view, an internally reported potential or actual compliance violation has not been remedied. The contact and access information for External Reporting Channels can be found in Annex 1 to this Guideline.

Further details on the activities of these external reporting channels can be found in the respective national whistleblower protection law as well as on the homepages of the authorities named therein.

If an external reporting body is not responsible for a report or if it is not possible for the authority to further investigate the reported violation within a reasonable period of time, it may at its due discretion forward the report to another competent body.

5 Can reports be submitted anonymously?

When submitting the report, the whistleblower can choose whether he wishes to disclose his identity which will be treated strictly confidential by the responsible Reporting Officer or whether he wishes to submit his report anonymously (without giving their name). If the whistleblower wishes to disclose his identity, he should state his first and last name.

As there may be queries about the information provided by the whistleblower, it is helpful if he leaves his contact details (e.g. email address, telephone number). This is the only way that the responsible Reporting Officer can provide the whistleblower with feedback on the processing of his report and ask any questions that may have arisen during processing. If the whistleblower prefers to communicate anonymously with the responsible Reporting Officer, he can set up a secure postbox for this purpose via the SpeakUp system.

6 What kind of reports can be reported to the Internal Reporting Channels?

All of Nordzucker's Internal Reporting Channels serve to receive reports on potential or actual compliance violations of legal or other regulations or internal rules (Code of Conduct, guidelines, work instructions, etc.).

Relevant reports in connection with our business activities may, for example, relate to the following topics:

- Occupational safety and health
- Product safety and conformity
- Competition and antitrust law
- Corruption and other criminal conduct (fraud, theft, etc.)
- Conduct, that constitutes an administrative offence
- Accounting (financial and non-financial reporting)
- Conflicts of interest
- Money laundering
- Export control regulations
- Confidentiality and secrecy obligations
- Data protection regulations
- IT security

- Discrimination or harassment
- Human rights
- Environmental protection
- Supplier Code of Conduct

Reports which do not fall within the personal or material scope of the respective national whistleblower protection law will also be treated strictly confidentially by the responsible Reporting Officer and processed in accordance with the procedures set forth in this Guideline.

General complaints about products, services or employees, as well as product and warranty enquiries, should be reported directly to the respective responsible departments within the company.

7 What information is needed to process the report via the Internal Reporting Channels?

The whistleblower should try to describe the incident as detailed and chronologically as possible. No details should be left out, no matter how insignificant they may seem to the whistleblower. But even if the whistleblower does not know all the facts of the matter, he should report it anyway and point out the gaps in his knowledge. If possible, the report should contain all information on an incident from which concrete suspicions can be derived.

The whistleblower should ask himself the following questions:

- Who? – Who is concerned? Who is affected?
- What? – What happened? Description of the facts.
- When? – When did the incident take place?
- How? – How did it happen?
- Where? – Where did the incident take place?

If the whistleblower has documents, files or something similar that substantiate the facts reported, the whistleblower should attach them to his report or make them available to the addressee of his report. If the whistleblower is aware of the existence of such documents, but they are not in his possession, the whistleblower should also inform the addressee.

The whistleblower should only give information about incidents where he assumes that the facts reported are correct. The whistleblower should not knowingly make untrue statements, otherwise he could be liable to prosecution and also to claim for damages. If the whistleblower has doubts about certain circumstances, he should make this clear by identifying them as an assumption, assessment or statement by another person. As long as the whistleblower reports potential or actual compliance violations to the best of his knowledge and belief, he does not have to fear any reprisals or disadvantages because of the report.

8 Processing of reports

8.1 Receipt of the report

After the whistleblower has submitted his report, the report will be documented by the responsible Reporting Officer. If the whistleblower has left his contact details or set up a secure postbox, he will receive a confirmation of receipt within seven days from the receipt of the report.

8.2 Investigation of the report

First, the responsible Reporting Officer will check whether the report contains sufficient information to process it. If there are any questions regarding the information provided by the whistleblower, the responsible Reporting Officer will contact the whistleblower - if possible.

Reports regarding inter-personal conflicts between employees (e.g. harassment, discrimination) which are submitted to the Internal Reporting Channels will be forwarded to the responsible function for Human Resources for the further handling.

If the compliance violation is confirmed, appropriate measures will be taken depending on the individual case. If the compliance violation is not confirmed or if the report is not plausible, the proceedings will be discontinued and closed.

8.3 Conclusion of the proceedings

If the whistleblower has left his contact details or set up a secure postbox, he will receive final feedback on further actions and the measures taken within three months of confirmation from the receipt of the report. However, feedback may only be provided to the extent that it does not affect investigations and does not prejudice the rights of the persons who are the subject of a report or who are named in the report. The same shall apply in the event of discontinuation of proceedings.

9 How are whistleblowers and persons named in the report protected?

No one who reports potential or actual compliance violations to the best of their knowledge and belief shall suffer any reprisals or disadvantages from Nordzucker as a result of the report. This applies to all our employees as well as to our business partners and other third parties.

Information from employees who were involved in compliance violations and avert damage to Nordzucker through their voluntary reporting will be considered in favor of the respective employee.

Information about potential or actual compliance violations is likely to cause serious damage to the reputation of the person concerned, third parties and Nordzucker. We therefore treat every report, the identity of the person who is subject of a report, the identity of other persons named in the report as well as the identity of the whistleblower strictly confidential, unless stated otherwise in the national laws. Therefore, only persons responsible for receiving and processing the reports have access to the report.

10 Data protection and retention periods

Data protection requirements are comprehensively observed. In particular, the personal data communicated in a report and determined in the course of the clarification of the facts are always archived anonymously after the investigation has been fully completed, including subsequent measures.

The documentation of the report will be deleted in accordance with the respective national laws.

11 Training

To make employees aware of which Internal Reporting Channels (including the SpeakUp system) are available within Nordzucker and to increase acceptance and awareness of them, all employees receive an annual training on them as part of the training on the Code of Conduct.

If required, training is regularly offered and additional information provided to the Reporting Officers.
